

SIPX Continues to Expand Its Footprint

We said it, we did it. The SIPX team is thrilled to unveil new growth in key initiatives: making our service offering faster and easier, strengthening our ties with existing customers and engaging new customers and partners, as well as developing broader relationships across the academic and publishing communities.

Welcome, New Schools and Consortia!

SIPX continues to grow, and we welcome our new schools University of Notre Dame, University of Denver, Pepperdine University, Rollins College and Normandale Community College.

Our consortia partners are a key part of SIPX's development. We're excited to announce new engagements with Amigos and LYRASIS, who join SCELc in SIPX's consortia family. If you are a consortium member and would like to benefit from special offers or streamlined invoicing, please contact Michelle Valiani.

Online courses and MOOC activity continues to advance as well – welcome Case Western Reserve University, University of Melbourne, HarvardX/MITX and University of Glasgow, who use SIPX to provide course readings to their tens of thousands of MOOC students. They join UT Austin and Stanford University, who are in their second and third iterations of MOOC courses leveraging SIPX this Fall.

Ever-growing Status of Publisher Content

Every day more easily searchable content goes live in our readings database - now containing more than 4,700,000 documents in the "SIPX Collection", with full metadata and PDFs, from more than 70 top academic publishers.

We also continue to grow our partnerships with leading publishers in their respective fields: Allen Press, America Physiological Society, Central European University Press, De Gruyter, Duke University Press, European Respiratory Society, FASEB, Manchester University Press,

A New Look for a New School Year

On August 1, SIPX launched a complete redesign of the SIPX service site, making SIPX an even simpler and faster way to deliver digital course materials to students. The new user-centric interface features:

- Faster, smoother student flow - fewer clicks to content
- Mobile responsive design to optimize smart phone and tablet reading
- Enhanced functionality for instructors to easily add free web resources to their reading lists
- Course module support for instructors to customize course experiences
- Fresh look and feel

This update focused on the student experience and throughout August we will continue to roll out complementary updates for course managers and librarians. To request a personal tour to see just how easy it is to leverage SIPX for your copyright management needs, please contact us at support@sipx.com.
